

SO WHO NEEDS THE DODGERS!

DODGERS
FLYERS

In New York City they call it a "Hoving Happening." In Brooklyn, it's a "Ciervo Colossal," as 500 uniformed lads and lassies turn out for opening day ceremonies at the Kings Bay Boys Club in Sheepshead Bay.

Ten years ago the Dodgers decided the heart of Brooklyn wasn't big enough for them. At the same time, in the shadow of their Ebbets Field, the legendary home of the 'Bums,' a taxi-cab driver decided that Brooklyn's heart was big enough for anything.

And Joe Ciervo, cabbie no. 9C43, proved it. In the winter of '57, Joe, then 35 years old, met in the basement storeroom of the Sheepshead Bay City Housing project with five friends to map strategy for what would become in a decade one of the finest little league baseball facilities in all of New York City—the Kings Bay Boys Club.

The intervening years were anything but easy for Joe and his friends. The dedicated volunteers scrimped and saved, policed vacant lots to serve as ballfields, ran Bingo games, sold chances, and sponsored benefit dinners and dances to raise money. Ciervo, as a self-employed hack driver, was the only one free to organize and seek out opportunities to further the dream.

The Kings Bay Boys Club was incorporated in 1960. Finally the big step came in 1962 when the cabbie, Joe, accompanied by a short order cook, an insurance man and their lawyer walked into City Hall and put a down payment on a city lot for $72,000.

Today the lot is all paid off and owned by the boys' club organization. On it are two regulation ballfields, concrete stands and dugouts, and a good-sized clubhouse containing offices, refreshment area, dressing and storage rooms.

Thirty-two locally sponsored teams, from 8-year-olds to sand-lot age, fully uniformed and equipped, take to the fields for two afternoon games daily and 14 games on the weekend during the season.

Joe Ciervo, unpaid president of the Kings Bay Club, parks his cab just outside the ballfield gate. He likes to see the "little rabbit," as he calls it, out there. "That cab is mostly responsible for this entire program," says Joe. "How else could we have chased dump trucks to bring fill to our park, chased around Brooklyn interesting people in our club, or held meetings with contractors as it rolled along with the meter running? It allowed me to hop on opportunities to help."

A community center building will be erected on one of the fields in the near future just as soon as the money is raised. It will contain club rooms, game rooms and indoor facilities to further the family fun and happy community life so evident in this section of Brooklyn's flatlands. For Joe's "little rabbit," it will probably mean a new set of tires.

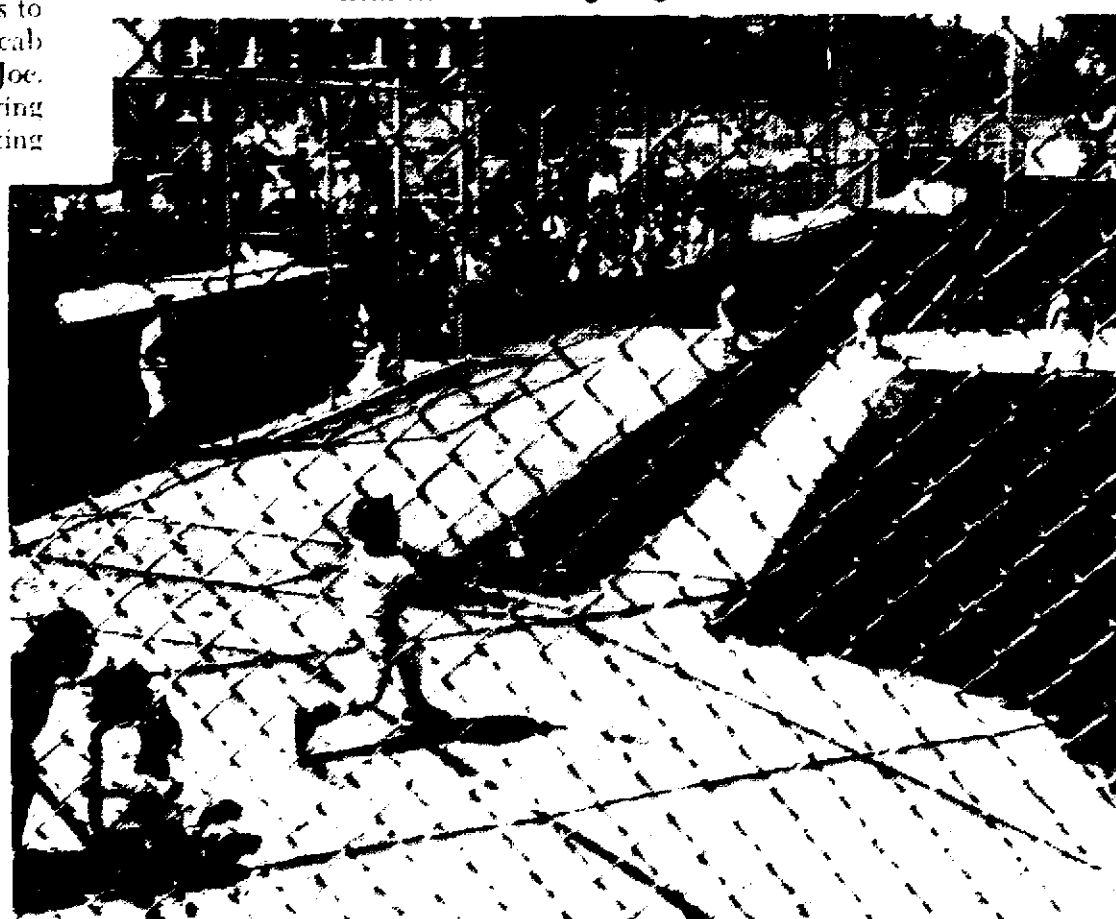

Joe Ciervo, who dodged bullets from Jap planes at Pearl Harbor, relaxes next to the "little rabbit" with two future big leaguers.

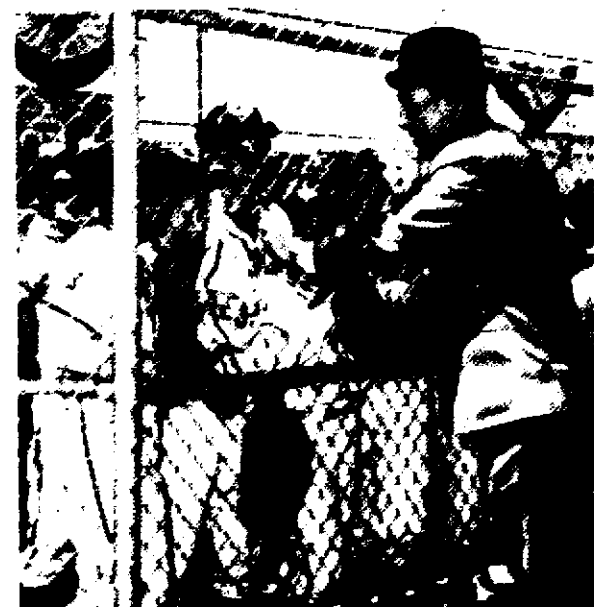

Inset shows the field during first stage of cleanup by the men of the community. Above is airview of approximately 200' x 450' lot transformed into two plush ballfields. On the horizon is Coney Island.

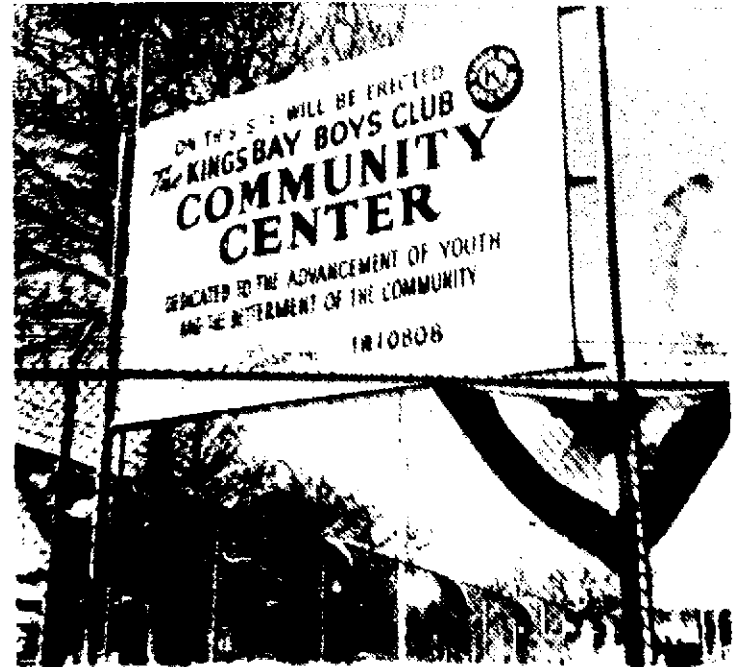

Just as in the major parks, opening day in little league is special. Local Assemblyman Lawrence Murphy tosses out first ball as some of Kings Bay Boys Club directors look on.

The roster of the teams' players reads like a U.N. delegate's list. There's no time here for anything but playing.

Cabbie Ciervo, himself a father of a boy in the Air Force and of a married daughter, chats with the Mantles and Koufaxes of tomorrow.

Plans are underway for a proposed neighborhood center. It will be built on second ballfield.

FUNNY, FUNNY, FUNNY, BUT THEY DON'T FOOL THIS COLUMNIST
Dear Helen:

Does it make you mad when you get hoaxes in the mail? And how can you tell a phony from a "real" letter? - Fans Dear Fans:

I sorta enjoy the hoaxes - they make me laugh. That's why I sometimes share them with my readers. Phonies are easy to spot mainly because wise-guys seldom stop at only one. They're so proud of their creations that they grind them out in batches... and I'm good at checking stationery, postmarks, odd quirks of the type-writer or pen.

For instance, three letters came to me in one day from the same town, all with the same commemorative stamp, cancellation date, printed address, unusual envelope and notepaper. I got pretty shook at the first "problem," until I discovered the writer was also a toothless taster of pickled possum feet, age 13. See below:

First hoax:
Dear Helen:
A few months ago I wrote to you concerning a marital problem. I took your advice and I just got out of the hospital after recovering from a broken arm, fractured head, and a divorce. Thanks a lot. - UNHAPPY DIVORCEE
(So sorry: I thought you said "marital.") Second hoax:
Dear Helen:
I am 13. Two years ago I was in a car accident in which I lost all my teeth, I was fitted for dentures and have been wearing them, but almost every time I open my mouth they fall out. What should I do? - EMBARRASSED (Got a new writer; you last hoax was earnest of all!)
Dear Helen:
My mother is just too old-fashioned. She insists on making the wildest foods. I mean dandelion greens and pickled possum feet-GREEN-FEET FOREVER (come on now, be original. How about peanut-butter-stuffed ard-varks' eggs?)

Next: a test. Read carefully and if you don't see why I pegged this a phony, you'd better take "Spelling" in summer school. Dear Helen:
I'm a teacher in an average American high school. My students threaten to mug me with their switch blades if I don't give them an "A" on their tests. They say they'll really go through with it if I tell the authorities. Everytime I give a test, I feel all cut up. Who can I go to?

YOUR HELPING HAND DEPARTMENT
Dear Helen:
A 15-year-old neighbor girl is paralyzed from the neck down. She now has a little movement of her arms-as a result of a swimming accident a year ago. At first she had quite a bit of company, but it has dwindled off, as has her mail. She's much in need of cheering cards and letters and, to put it in her words, she thinks it would be "neat" hearing from kids and grown-ups all over the country. Won't you ask your readers to write to: Debbie Asman, Stanford Children's Convalescent Hospital Palo Alto, California, 94305. Thank you, -D.H.

Wedding Vows Are Repeated

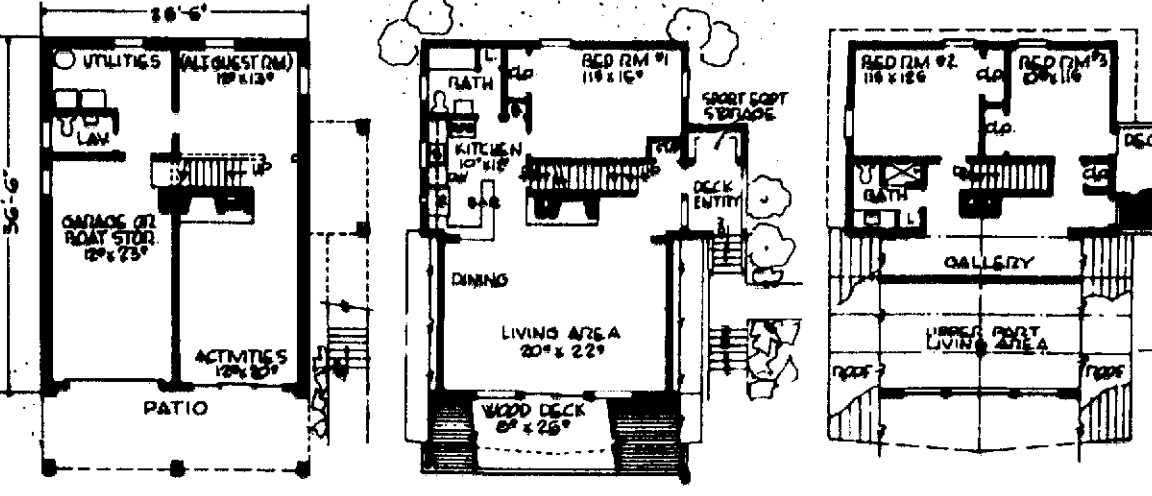

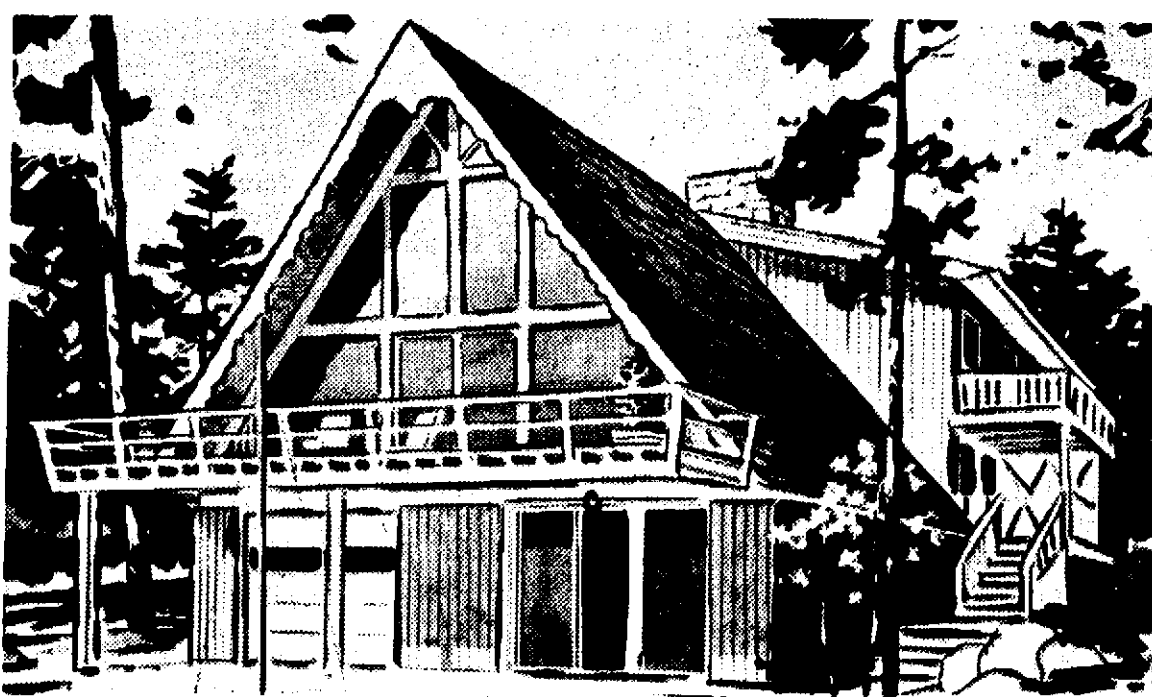

MRS. JAMES LEROY ALLISON

The historic St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Richmond, Virginia, was the setting for the wedding of Miss Mary Logan Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sidney Holland of Richmond, and James Lee Roy Allison, Jr., son of Mrs. James Lee Roy Allison of Hope and the late Mr. Allison, on Friday, June 9 at 4:30 p.m.
The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Reverend Joseph T. Heistand, Rector, assisted by the Reverend Doctor Boyd Roberts Howarth, an altar decorated with seven-branched candelabra and two baskets of white stocks and gladiolus. A program of wedding music was played by the organist, Jacques Nies-Berger.
As "Trumpet Volantaire" by Purcell was played, the bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of white peau de soie appliqued with Alencon lace. Her veil was a cathedral-length mullia of Alencon lace. The bridal bouquet was of gardenias and white orchids.
Miss Elizabeth Meade Howarth of Richmond, wearing pastel pink silk linen, was the bride's honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Ruth Ballard, Greenville, South Carolina; Miss Martha Burton Allison of Hope, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Sarah Atwater Mason, Petersburg, Virginia; Mrs. Thomas Sidney Holland, Jr., Springfield, Virginia, brother of the bride; First Lieutenant William Erwin Spahnauer, Washington, D. C.; and First Lieutenant George Gordon Worthen, Little Rock.
For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Holland wore pastel blue with matching accessories, while Mrs. Allison, mother of the bridegroom, wore pastel green with matching accessories. Each had an orchid corsage.
A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the Tuckahoe Woman's Club.
After a wedding trip to Sea Island, Georgia, the newlyweds will be at home at Fort Eustis, Virginia, where the bridegroom, a lieutenant in the United States Army, is stationed.

Jews Flocking to Embassy to Offer Aid

By KELLY SMITH
WASHINGTON (AP) - Israel's bunker in Washington is a 10 by 12-foot Victorian drawing room with a portable television set.
Hebrew language newspapers are on the floor. Ashtrays brim with cigarettes. A telephone in one corner rings intermittently.
As one enters, there's a hushed "shalom, shalom."
The visitor's waiting room at the Israeli chancery, normally large enough for guests, now overflows with Israeli sympathizers.
Crowds line up in the narrow hall to peek inside. Some sit on the chancery steps, waiting.
Volunteer college students man the doors, direct traffic and answer the overloaded switchboard.
They come 20 and 30 at a time - mothers with children, old people, grade schoolers, exchange students. They come, they say, because they want to be where the action is. They want to be a part.
Upstairs, far removed from the drawing room, embassy officials work undisturbed.
Viewers greet telecasts of U.N. Security Council debate and other commentary with the gust of baseball fans. Depending on the speaker there are boos or cheering, disgust or argument. "Quiet, quiet."
There's Yigal Pisetzky, 26, of Jerusalem, an engineering student at American University. He served in the Israeli army five years ago, and he has a brother now drafted.
Like most of the rest, Pisetzky tried to go back to Israel, but couldn't.
Chim Kanner, 30, is from Tel Katzir near the Syrian border and was in the army during the Suez crisis in 1956. He has parents in Tel Aviv. He smokes a cigarette and watches, worried.
Five months ago Benjamin Megiddo was a 2nd Lieutenant in the Israeli army. He's 23, from Tel Aviv. His sister Ruth, 20, is still in the service.
Megiddo serves rye bread sandwiches. The television viewers reshuffle during a commercial. "I wish I was still there," he says. "All we can do here is watch." And he sits down again, to watch.

Bob Thomas at the Movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - "The battle of the apostrophe" has been joined, and it looks as though movie writers and directors will be firing along the lines all summer.

Television and Radio

By GENE HANDSAKER
HOLLYWOOD (AP) - If there's a trend in television, Bruce Geller notes, it's a trend away from trends.

Even among Westerns - "Rawhide," "The Westerner," "Laramie," "Road West" and "Johnny Ringo" - only the durable "Gunsmoke," "Bonanza" and "Virginian" remain in production - plus fall's upcoming "High Chaparral" and "Dundee."

Medicine shows? "Medic," "Kildare," "Casey," "General Hospital," "Doctors and Nurses" have faded.

Private-detective programs like "Richard Diamond" and "Tightrope" have tipped away, leaving only "Mannix," a new show which Geller is producing for fall.

As Geller sees it, "Get Smart," starring Don Adams as a bumbling hero, sparked a recent trend to zany, unreal comedies including "Captain Nice" and "Mr. Terrific." Adams won an Emmy last Sunday, but the other two shows and their bungling supermen won't be back.

The trend-away-from-trends, says Geller, is good.

"Trends are nice for advertising agencies and sponsors. Trends allow you not to use your decision-making mind. Agencies and sponsors figure, 'If it's like 'Bonanza,' it's got to be good.'"

Geller, a swarthy, cool 36, carried off two Emmys at Sunday night's ceremonies as executive producer of "Mission: Impossible" and writer of one of its segments. The show captured awards also for best actress - Barbara Bain - and film editing, the four winning categories making it second only to Brigadoon's five.

Geller classifies "Mission: Impossible" as intrigue-adventure.

What's distinctive about it?

The spectacled, studious-looking producer, a onetime high school salutatorian and Yale drama major, analyzes: "It's a filmic show, with not much dialogue, with an editorial style that's far closer to new-wave features than most TV shows. It's a pure-story in which we say roughly three times as much as most shows."

"Everything happens from the show's start - we're not much involved with what happened before we went on the air. And we have a great cast of actors."

Surviving are his wife, three sons, James O. of Roanoke, Hollis of Yellville, Nelson Carlton of Alaska; three daughters, Mrs. Mae Jones of Emmet, Mrs. O. alongside the title of his future pictures. Neither could Samuel Goldwyn if he should produce again. Or Darryl Zanuck."

The directors applied for a temporary injunction against the writers and producers, charging restraint of trade. It was denied May 18 by Judge Ralph M. Nuttner of California's Supreme Court. He ruled that an injunction would endanger the writers' pension-welfare plan. He did not rule on the merits of the directors' case.

The new contract was signed on the afternoon of the decision. Mrs. Rohde (Ruth Bryan Owen) was appointed minister to Denmark in 1933, the first woman envoy to be accredited to a foreign government by the United States.

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

IT'S OVERSEAS CULTURE for kollegers at Kalamazoo: Kalamazoo College, Mich., has grasped one problem (the U.S. scarcity of higher educational facilities) and latched onto one inevitable trend (the rush to study in other countries than your own) ... and knotted them neatly together into the outstanding foreign study program for students in the United States. Ninety per cent of the more than 1,100 guys and gals enrolled at the Michigan institution will study abroad during their sophomore or junior years ... and less than 1 per cent of them will flunk out of such hallowed or exotic halls as—the Universities of Erlangen (Germany), Madrid (Spain), Caen (France), Waseda (Japan), the University of East Africa (Kenya), and Bogota, Colombia's school with the fine, reverberating, hispanic name—Centro de Estudios Universitarios de Colombia-Americano. Only in its sixth full year, the program has made modest Kalamazoo into a world campus populated with globe-trotting students. Fresh back from a precedent-breaking year in new-nation Africa, two of them were exclusively interviewed by YOUTH BEAT.

Tall, slender 20-year-old Joe Young of Plainfield, N.J., unfettered by studies in Nairobi, Kenya, reported academic standards in this new-born babe of a country as good as ours ... customs of dating and marriage more conservative. ... Joe, who during one of his "out-of-college quarter years" studied by working in the office of a Washington congressman, is a political science major. "How could I learn more," he says, "than by watching a new country in the throes of growth under a world-famous leader and ex-Mau Mau, President Kenyatta?" On the other side of Africa, even taller, blond Bruce Haight of Whitehall, Mich., has just finished a history major year at Fourah Bay College (founded 1827) in Freetown, Sierra Leone. Bruce found himself matching books and brains, at this Harvard of Africa, with students hand-picked by their governments to be their country's future leaders. These students, he found, exaggerated American civil rights problems. Western ideals of love. The gain for his education, he said, was "having to study in a world so completely different from the U.S.—makes you re-evaluate your own society, broadens your outlook and gives you a goal of learning instead of just getting grades."

Except The LORD Build The HOUSE They Labor In Vain That Build It

How Far Can You See?

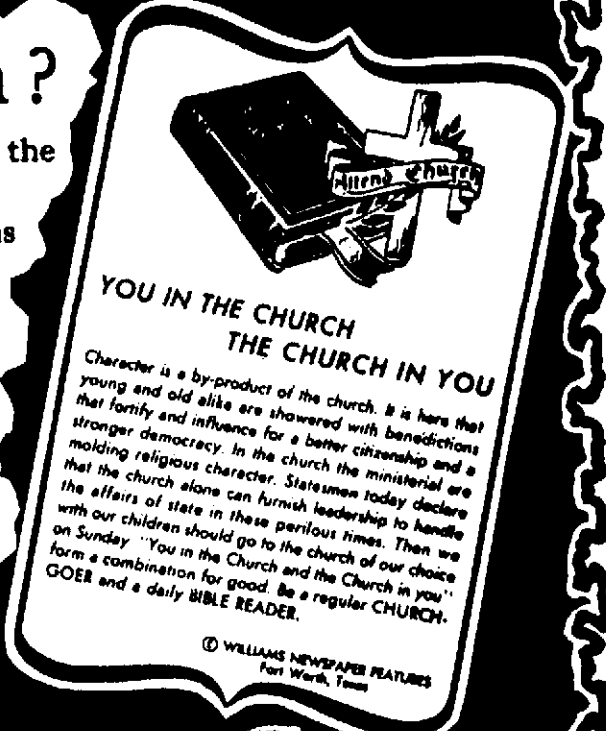

How distant is your horizon?

That depends on your point of view... where you are when you look. Of course, the higher you are the farther you can see. Jesus said, "Friend, come up higher."

He wants you to see better... to see the world's misery and needs through His eyes. He wants you to see one-third of the earth's population going to bed hungry every night... one-fourth of the world existing on less than the average American spends for cigarettes and alcohol. Are you guilty? God wants you to look at the world as He does. He wants you to see the people of other races and nationalities as He sees them... your neighbor, around the world, as your brother. Maybe you need to go to church Sunday and let Him take away the dimness of your eyes. He can open up new horizons for you to view. He wants you to do something about your own shriveled soul and for the souls of His people throughout the world.

You can see farther when you look through Jesus.

Too often we are inclined to think that anybody who spends a dollar for advertising does it from a purely selfish standpoint. But here, public-spirited, God-worshiping people, are paying each week to insert in this paper a full page, from which they will draw no quick response nor prompt sale. These people are good and humble business men — We owe them our gratitude.

WIN AT BRIDGE
Vanishing Act For Slam Set
By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
The late Philip Hal Sims was probably the greatest auction bridge player. He also was mighty good at contract except that he liked to bid his slams by the quickest possible method. Of course there wasn't much science to the game in Hal's day and even today we see nothing much wrong with his jump to six diamonds over his partner's two no-trump.
Hal made little ceremony about dummy play. He won the heart lead with his ace and put his ace of diamonds on the table. East showed out and West remarked, "If I'd known that you held both the ace and king of trumps I would have doubled you."
Hal looked over the hand
for a second and replied,
"Maybe you will be glad that you didn't." Then Hal proceeded to make his contract.
He was lucky to do so after the bad trump break but without that break he would have had no problems at all.
It wasn't done with mirrors but just by praying that West would have to follow to three leads of each side suit.
Hal led a club to dummy's ace and ruffed a club. Then he led a heart to dummy's king and ruffed a heart. Then he played out three rounds of spades, stopping in dummy.
At this point Hal was down to four trumps and West held three trumps and either a club or a heart. It was up to Hal to decide which suit the other card was in but East had helped Hal out. East had played the four of hearts at trick one and dropped the three of hearts under dum-

Tailored for Breakage

Ever wonder why there aren't more casualties at the launching of a new ship, what with flying glass as the traditional bottle of bubbly is broken over the bow? A peek into preparation of the bottle for a Pittsburgh, Pa., shipbuilding firm may explain why. The bottle is first scored, at left, for easier breaking over the ship's hull, and then wrapped in a wire mesh which lets the foam fly, but keeps glass particles inside. The top is also wrapped with tape so the christener won't cut her hands, then wrapped decoratively, as at lower left.

Says Turbine Engine to Be Approved

CHICAGO (AP) — Andy Granatelli says the U.S. Auto Club decision to submit his controversial turbine-powered racing car to a panel of turbine experts "is tantamount to approval."

Granatelli, president of Studebaker's STP Division, said Thursday, "We are proceeding to build Turbocar replicas at the STP Division's Paxton Engineering plant in Santa Monica (Calif.) and we certainly anticipate a winning season for turbine automobiles, either our own or the product of some one who builds better ones."

USAC said Wednesday it would ask experts of Pratt & Whitney, which built the Granatelli engine, and other makers to help compare the faster STP turbine car with piston engine cars.

The STP car, driven by Parnelli Jones, dominated the Indianapolis 500-mile race before a gear box failure forced it to the pits with 10 miles left.

Field Meet Opens Without Sanction

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The United States Track and Field Federation Championships open tonight in altitude-rich Albuquerque without Amateur Athletic Union sanction.

The USTFF, whose parent body — the National Collegiate Athletic Association — is at odds with the AAU, says it did not seek the sanction.

Jim Ryun, in town for the 880 and the mile, was affected by lack of sanction in last year's USTFF meet when he ran a world record time of 1:44.9 in the half-mile only to have the standard disallowed internationally because the meet had not won AAU blessing.

Should Ryun or any other competitors at the 5,100-foot altitude in University Stadium crack a record barrier, USTFF officials predict a similar course.

Ryun, who holds the world record and american record in the mile, is on the mile entry list as well as tonight's 800.

Dennis Makes 'Mad' Pay

Dennis Ralston, erstwhile bad boy of amateur tennis, suddenly looms as the good guy of pro tennis, the one man with the indefinable color to replace a fading Pancho Gonzales. And it isn't because Dennis has conquered his temper. "I still get mad as hell at myself," he says, "but as an amateur, it would hurt me and cost me points in a game. Now it doesn't. I'm the same player, but I've finally learned to have it work for me rather than against me. Getting mad is part of my natural make-up and makes me play better."

As a pro, Laver holds an edge over every other pro in matches, except Rod Laver (whom he's defeated six times out of 16). Included are two drubbings of Pancho Gonzales, his old coach, in two jousts.

First mission Johnny Sain undertook as new pitching coach of the Detroit Tigers was to fly to Puerto Rico, in his own plane, to look over Joe Sparma. And the first set of instructions delivered by Sain to Sparma was to read a book he handed the slumping righthander. It was titled, "Psychocybernetics." Explains Sparma, "It's about the power of positive thinking. You start believing in yourself, and you believe you can do things."

Psychocybernetics is also the frame of mind that coach Blanton Collier induced in quarterback Frank Ryan when that hesitant warrior first reported to the Cleveland Browns... and ultimately became a fearless leader.

Amazing how, my newspaper brethren completely ignored Dave Hart's feverish blast at the NCAA and the people who run Eastern college football for their double standards on grades, athletic scholarships, red shirting, etc. Said the young Pitt coach bluntly, "We've got a new chancellor coming in in June, and I hope he's gung ho about winning."

Did you know that Gen. William Eckert was rescued by baseball from becoming ambassador to Nicaragua, when he was yanked from obscurity into the commissioner's post?

Herewith our privately researched report on the pitchers who are known to resort to spitters in critical situations: American League—Lew Burdette, Jack Sanford, Camilo Pascual, Ron Kline, Hank Aguirre, John Wyatt, Whitey Ford; National League—Gaylord Perry, Don Drysdale, Phil Regan, Bob Shaw, Pete Ramos (he calls it a Cuban palm ball), Jack Fisher, Bob Bruce and Larry Jackson.

Whitey Ford's retirement, midst tears, caused manager Sam Mele to recall the end of his playing days. "I was darn glad to get out of there," mused Sam. "They sent me down to the minors, and I found myself ducking away from every pitch. I quit before I got killed."

Part of the job of being a major league catcher is knowing the attitude of the pitchers, whom to lead, whom to give free rein. For instance, on the San Francisco Giants, Tom Haller finds that "Gaylord Perry follows me, everything I call. So I pretty well run the game." But Juan Marichal, the hottest pitcher in baseball, runs the show pretty much his own way. "Marichal has different ideas," admits Tom, "and frequently calls off the pitch I signal. I let him decide what he wants to throw."

Between you'n'me, midst all the rumors early this spring that he'd be traded even up for Mike Epstein, pitcher Mel Stottlemyre kept insisting it wouldn't be a good deal to swap a front-line pitcher for an unproven rookie. And after Epstein went to the Senators, Stot reiterated, "It wouldn't have been a good deal straight up for Pete Richert. The Orioles had to throw in Frank Bertina to make it worth-while."

DETROIT — (NEA) — The Detroit Tigers were scheduled to play the Minnesota Twins in Orlando, Fla., early last March and were quietly dressing for the game.

Suddenly the clubhouse door opened and Jim Kaat, Dave Boswell and Jim Grant of the Twins came trooping through the Tiger dressing room looking for Johnny Sain.

Joe Sparma looked up at the handshaking, backslapping reunion with an amazed expression on his face.

From that point, he started to believe all the stories he had heard about Sain's powers as a rehabilitator of sagging pitchers and pitching staffs.

At the time, Joe Sparma, as pitchers go, was sagging more than Jackie Gleason's stomach.

From 13-8 in 1965 he had dropped to 2-7 in 1966 and he started to wonder if he had chosen the right sport after all the was a quarter-back for Woody Hayes at Ohio State.

This season, he won his first five games, the Tigers were battling the White Sox for first place and Joe Sparma wasn't even thinking about football.

Yes, part of the reason for the change has been Johnny Sain.

"He gives me confidence," Sparma said. "I once had a pitching coach who told me my control was so bad I'd be behind every hitter by a pitch before the hitter even came up. Isn't that great to hear?"

"With John it's different. He knows everything about you. He studies your style, your game."

"If you hit a bad streak, you don't have to worry about not getting another chance. He lets you know that. I feel it's important."

"It's the little things he does and says. For example, I remember giving up a bloop hit once and he comes out and says, 'You really got the guy out.' Maybe it doesn't seem much to you, but it's a lot better than getting chewed out."

Sain's contribution to the rejuvenation of Joe Sparma has been mostly psychological. But the psychological—in Joe's case—manifests itself in the physical.

"I feel a lot better this year," Joe said. "A year ago, I slammed a door on my pitching hand. It was early in spring training. By the time I recovered, I was pretty far behind. Then early in the season we had the usual rainouts and cold weather."

"When I pitched, I pitched badly. I admit that. I never seemed to get untracked. And when that happens, things just seem to get worse."

"Last winter, I went to Puerto Rico and pitched there. John came down to work with me on my slider and my delivery. The extra work helped me, too. I needed it because I didn't pitch much last season."

Cong Hit U. S. Position With Mortar

By GEORGE ESPER

SAIGON (AP) — Communist artillerymen unleashed a barrage of mortars and Russian-made rockets on U.S. positions in Pleiku City in the central highlands today, killing two Americans and wounding 37. Eight miles to the northeast a heavy mortar attack on a Montagnard village killed 24 mountain tribesmen and wounded 60. Aside from the mortar assaults, however, the week-long slowdown in ground fighting continued. U.S. aircraft flew strikes against rail facilities in North Vietnam and struck widely scattered targets in South Vietnam.

No U.S. planes were reported lost. In Saigon military sources said they saw no significance in the lull in fighting. They pointed out that periods of intense combat have often been separated by periods of minor skirmishing.

A U.S. military spokesman in Pleiku said the mortar and rocket attacks on the Pleiku defense perimeter, on an artillery camp and on other U.S. installations were coordinated. The mortars were 82mm, the spokesman said. He thought the rockets were either 120 or 140mm.

As a result, most people develop "useful" hobbies because their consciences won't allow them to be happy just doing nothing. Everything, including children's play, must be organized and constructive, which prohibits simple loafing.

"Without relaxation," Dr. Martin says, "There is no opportunity to clear the mental decks and open the mind. Relaxation lets your imagination roam freely and allows for development. We should be free to choose from a variety of activities. We should be able to let ourselves go and just have fun."

Fat chance, doctor. Today, the citizen who relaxes is ostracized by his more industrious neighbors and hounded by his wife. He is labeled as the resident sloth of the neighborhood. His only recourse is through a change in geography, and that isn't infallible.

At the beach, in the mountains or at the lake, he will be permitted to lounge about doing nothing for only a fraction of the time, if at all. Most of the time, he will be cajoled into strenuously lapping up the wonders of the local scene.

Undoubtedly, the small voice of the psychiatrist will be shouted down along with that of the individual, since both are fighting a system whose credo is that leisure is not acceptable unless it is really worked at. — Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser

Computers Against Crime Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential crime commission report says use of computers could limit a fundamental weakness in crime control—lack of quick information. The report said the computer could provide immediate information from a central data bank to any police officer on wanted persons or stolen property.

It also could help place officers quickly at trouble spots which erupt quickly, correlate facts about past crimes to help solve new ones and help prescribe treatment for offenders.

The report was released Sunday by the task force on science and technology of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice. It is the fifth of nine reports released after a detailed study of crime in America.

Nicholas Katzenbach, undersecretary of state, former attorney general and the commission chairman, said he hopes the report will result in a major program of applying science and technology to crime control. "Heretofore, science has limited itself mainly to solving individual crimes," he said. "Now, through the use of computers, integrated communications systems, better command and control systems and systems analysis—science can begin to seek solutions to the overall problems of controlling crime."

The American Bar Association's advisory committee on law, order and crime, which is studying all states and the federal government give criminal defendants the right to challenge sentences imposed by trial judges.

Caddo Gap Is Ideal Location for System to Study the Stars

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

Whether in a scientific laboratory or a TV story, man, today, is reaching for the stars. In Arkansas we have an ideal location for an earth station to use in a communications satellite system, and it's close by—near Caddo Gap.

This is not some look-far-ahead plan, but an actual fact that is in existence, and it called the Arkansas Research Test Station or ARTS. It is a project of Hughes Aircraft Company, which has one of the strongest scientific teams in the nation.

The idea for an earth station, designed specifically for use with a synchronous orbit communications satellite was initiated and developed by Hughes' engineers. Although necessary satellite control was practically demonstrated in the Syncom and Early Bird satellite programs, the concept of an actual ground station did not reach fruition until 1965, when ARTS was conceived in its present form.

The Arkansas location provides geographical visibility to both Atlantic and Pacific satellites and is relatively free of microwave relay link interference. The valley in which the site is located was selected after Hughes Aircraft Company engineers made detailed analyses of geographical shielding from existing radio communications channels. The construction permit granted to Hughes Aircraft Company by the Federal Communications Commission is the first of its type ever issued.

To the layman all phases of the operation are complicated, but at least one of its objectives is easily understood. That is for it to serve as a test center for radio, television, and telephone systems via synchronous orbit satellites. These systems will provide instantaneous, inexpensive communications linkage among all nations of the world. A stationary satellite's coverage, in which earth stations are able to communicate with one another by means of this satellite, extends over 38.2 per cent of the earth's surface.

If you are near Caddo Gap sometime, you would probably be interested in seeing the ARTS. Its antenna is of a new design—a dish-shape that looks as if it were propped up on its side. Though we don't have its dimensions, the "dish" is quite a good deal larger than the building housing equipment which is found nearby.

The story of the Hughes Enterprise in Arkansas came, not by satellite, but by mail. John McLeod, formerly of Hope and now with another Hughes project in Japan, knew of our interest in the satellite and supplied information about it. The reason for our correspondent's being in Japan? Well...

Hughes has been known primarily as a developer and supplier of military systems and equipment to all branches of the U.S. military establishment and for major contributions to the national space effort. Today, however, Hughes is increasingly involved in producing electronic products and systems for commercial and industrial customers, and through an expanding international organization, for the governments of friendly foreign nations. John's work is in connection with a new air defense system which Hughes has sold to many nations, including Japan.

Our world of electronic miracles has greatly decreased the distance between countries, for purposes of peace or war. The result? It is sometimes quicker to go half-way around the world in search of answers than to find them practically in your back yard.

Blames War on Stupidity of Nasser

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stupidity of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser precipitated the Mideast war. But the United Nations, the organization which might have been able to prevent it, dawdled instead.

It can never excuse itself on this. And there's no guarantee it will do any better the next time, which may be worse. But the war happened and now the future of the Middle East almost certainly will be rearranged.

All last week the U.N. Security Council, knowing war might begin any moment, mumbled and bumbled over how to phrase a resolution calling for no war. Even when it began the council took two days to agree on demanding a cease-fire.

The United States, which claimed to be neutral but hardly would have stood by and watched Israel annihilated, and the Soviet Union, which said it supported Nasser, jockeyed around in all this. Their motivations will be a subject of speculation a long time. It was a shabby performance by a world organization supposedly dedicated to peace and preserving it.

But Nasser's performance was irresponsible and it's doubtful the Egyptians will put up with him much longer. He is 49 now but he was a young man in the Israeli-Arab war of 1948 in which Israel sheeked the Arabs. He brooded over the humiliation but, as it turned out, he was impulsive. The first big demonstration of this came in 1952.

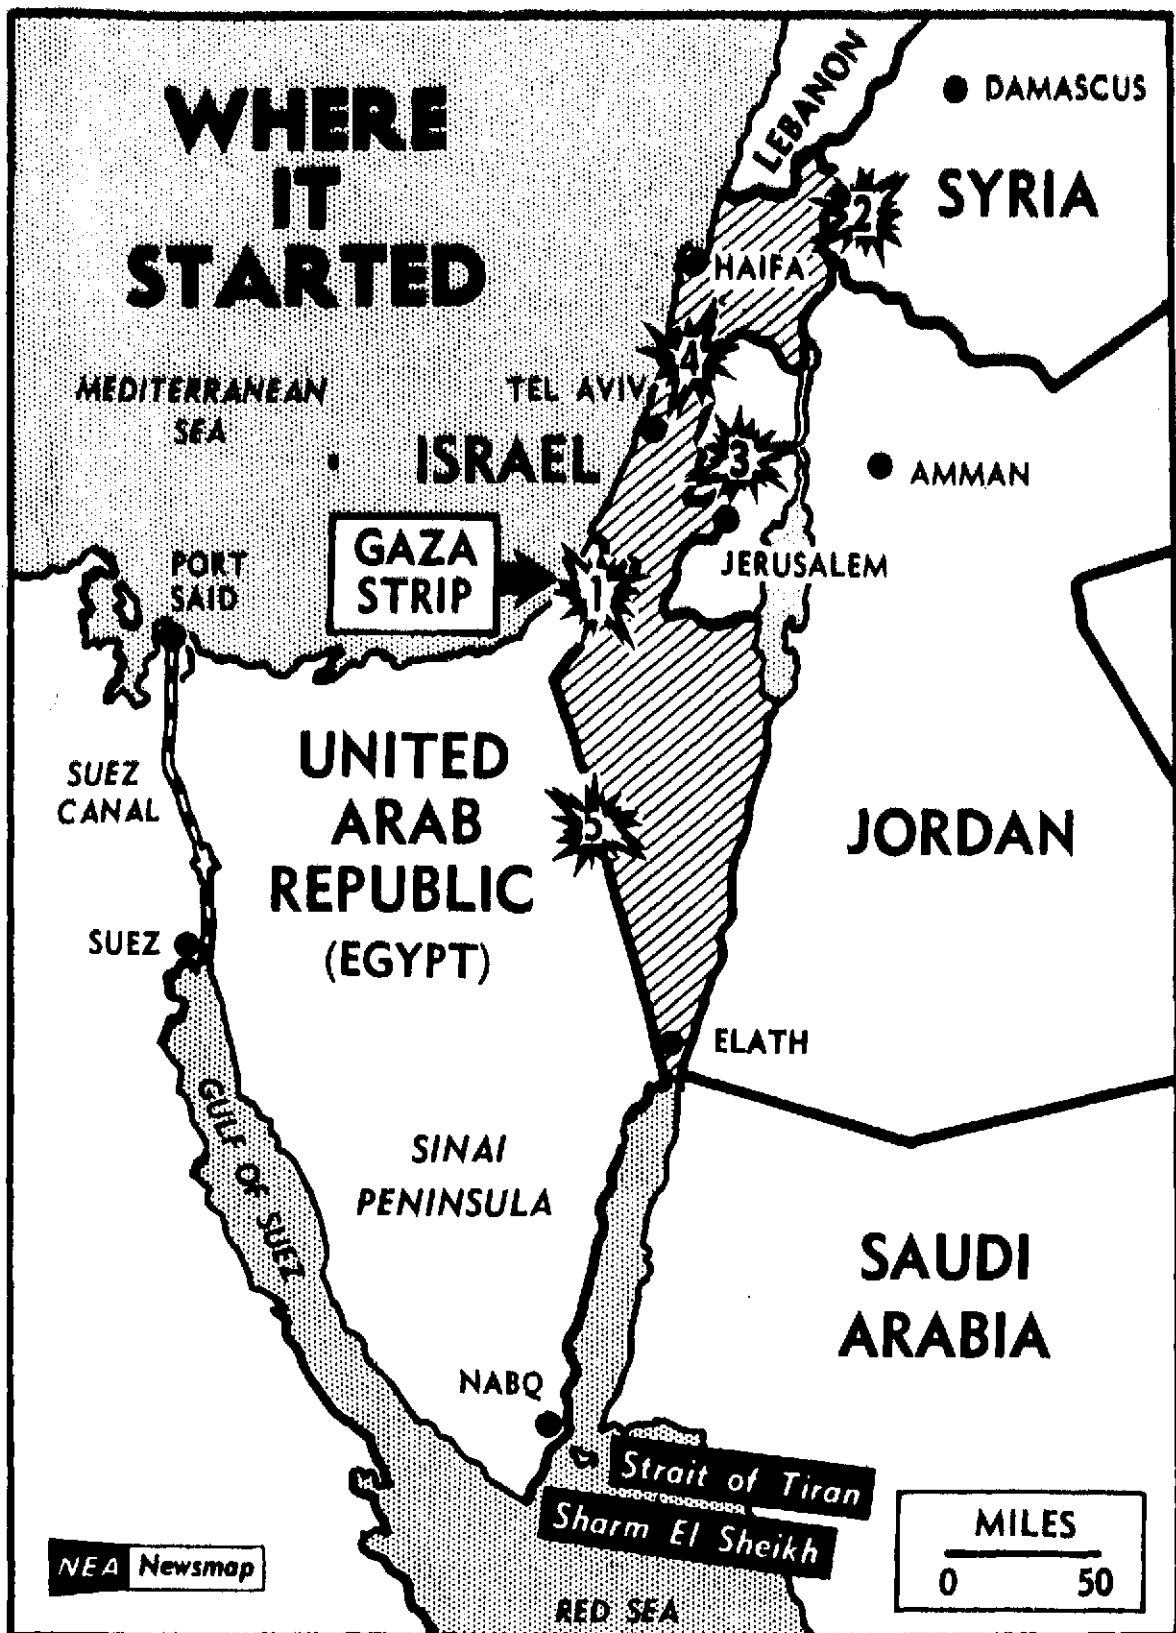

In that year he and a group of fellow-officers plotted to throw out King Farouk, and did, to end corruption and get Egypt moving. But he later admitted he and his co-conspirators didn't know what to do when Farouk was gone. They hadn't planned ahead.

Then in 1956, two years after he took power, he tried a caper which would have made him a big man in the Arab world, and humiliated Israel, if he had gotten away with it without trouble. He suddenly nationalized the Suez Canal.

But the reaction was instant: Britain, France and Israel attacked, with the Israelis tearing through the Egyptian army as if it were a bunch of ragamuffins. This was a new humiliation and Nasser acted subdued for a long time.

He lost prestige among the Arabs. Some of the leaders detested him. He was accused of being a Western lackey, hiding behind the U.N. troops whom he permitted to patrol the border with Israel to keep the peace. Meanwhile, he built up his military forces, arming them with modern weapons supplied by the Soviets. Then he made the biggest gesture of his life, and his biggest mistake, once again acting apparently without any real planning.

Using minor clashes between Israelis and Syrians as his reason, he called the Arab world to arms against Israel. Arab leaders, including those who despised him, rallied around, no doubt because they felt they had to. Nasser had made it a Jewish-Arab issue.

Industrial Potential Is Boosted

A new dam and reservoir, coupled with other available resources, have boosted the industrial potential of a five-county area of southwest Arkansas, according to a study released today by the Economic Development Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce.

The counties covered in the EDA-sponsored study are Little River, Hempstead, Miller, Lafayette and Columbia.

The study was requested by the Southwest Arkansas Water District, head-quartered in Texarkana, and conducted by Brown & Root, a professional consulting firm from Houston, Texas.

The Water District is a public agency created to withdraw and sell water from the Millwood Reservoir to city and industrial customers in the five-county area.

To distribute this water, EDA last year approved a $1,870,000 grant to help build a $3,740,000 water system to serve the five counties and their communities of Magnolia, Ashdown, Hope, Texarkana, Fulton, Foreman and Stamps.

Industrial expansion is already underway in the area, according to the report released today. The Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Company is locating near Ashdown with 400 direct jobs plus other opportunities for employment in supplying operations.

The Arkansas Cement Company is expanding its plant at Foreman. In addition, other companies are developing expansion programs in the area, according to the report.

There are particularly good opportunities in southwest Arkansas for setting up a plywood mill using Loblolly pine which is plentiful in the area, according to the report. This type plywood is eagerly sought throughout eastern United States for construction purposes, the report explains.

The study says the five-county area has readily available several resources which could be developed and used by industry locating there.

These include an abundant water supply, timber, stone and sand, bromine, oil and natural gas, agriculture and livestock, electric power and industrial fuel.

There is also an available supply of common and semi-skilled labor.

The combination of large stands of commercial forests plus available water should make the area especially attractive to pulp mills, veneer plants, furniture and manufacturers and wood-preserving plants, the report declares.

It adds that cement plants could take advantage of the limestone deposits, and the abundance of clay should be an attraction to brick plants and the ceramic industry.

Noting the area's agricultural production, the report says that meat, dairy and poultry processing and packaging plants could be developed because of the availability of farm products.

The study also points out that the area is served by a variety of transportation networks and distribution can be made overnight to areas within a 500-mile radius with a market of more than 25 million people.

To assist new industrial development, several industrial foundations have been established to aid firms in locating sites and in financing industrial plants, the report states.

Hearing Set on Pine Bluff Strike

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Federal District Judge Oren Harris has set a hearing next Wednesday on Pine Bluff's motion to have its suit against striking municipal employees returned to the Chancery Court here.

The city filed suit in Chancery Court May 29 to have some 80 members of the city's Sanitation, Street and Sewer Departments enjoined from picketing and striking.

The strikers, represented by Local 966 of the Arkansas Council of State, County and Municipal Employees, filed a petition Monday to remove it to the federal court.

The strike began May 29.

Syria Says Israel Planes Bomb City

By CHARLES STORER

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant told the Security Council early today that a U.N. observer in Damascus had reported that city was being attacked by air.

Thant said the chairman of the Israel-Syria Mixed Armistice Commission in Damascus, Irish Lt. Gen. R.H.W. Bunworth, had reported at 5:32 a.m. EDT, "Air attack on Damascus going on."

Syria has charged that Israel's planes have been bombing its capital city in violation of the council's three cease-fire resolutions, which both countries have accepted.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg immediately said, "The bombing of Damascus cannot be condoned by any member of the council."

He asked that U.N. observers be sent to check on Israel's charges that Syria was shelling Israeli border villages, bolstered by reports from U.N. observers of intense artillery fire north of Tiberias in the Jordan Valley.

Soon after, at 6:02 a.m., the council recessed by request of Indian Ambassador Gopalaswami Parthasarathi to consult on what to do.

Thant produced the message on the air attack under questioning from Soviet and Bulgarian delegates, after Goldberg had raised the question whether an earlier report from Thant on a Damascus air raid had come from Bunworth or from Syrian authorities.

Syrian Ambassador George J. Tomeh, who had asked for the urgent meeting that convened at 4:32 a.m., told the council that Israeli ground forces had taken Koneytra and were fighting toward Damascus.

He spoke after Thant read the council his original report. Thant said he had a message from Norwegian Lt. Gen. Odd Bull, head of the U.N. truce supervision organization in Palestine, that "an air attack took place on Damascus airport area."

But Thant also said Bull reported that an Israeli official had told him Israeli forces "are not in Koneytra and not on the road to Damascus" and asked him to send observers to see.

War Caught U. S. Leaders by Surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top administration officials acknowledged to congressional leaders that the swift outbreak of Arab-Israeli fighting caught them by surprise, informants say.

It was one of the few reports that filtered out of a Capitol Hill briefing Monday by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Pichard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency. The need for secrecy was emphasized at the briefing.

"They knew of course how serious the situation was but they thought they had more time to work on it," said one member of Congress who attended.

But Congress members, who often mount the battlements with an oratorical arsenal at the first flash of crisis, generally were following a silence-is-golden course.

"It's a very serious situation and people off won't help it at all," said one congressional leader.

What comment there was centered on urgings for a cease-fire and U.N. action.

But if congressional concern could not be measured in decibels it could be in numbers.

When an invitation went out to senators to sit in at a late afternoon briefing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by a State Department official more than half the Senate showed up. Surprised committee Chairman J.W. Fulbright counted 56 senators jammed into the relatively small hearing room a floor down from the Senate chambers.
